Dear Mr. Dulles =

(At a lunch
on a "cute" story pertain ing to one of our overseas representatives made me almost physically ill,
before it made me angry enough to write - as I should.
A man named [Redacted] in [Redacted] - speaks [Redacted] and seemingly is admirably suit ed to his position. but here's the "cute angle" attached.

The story teller said that she thought that he was using great Yankee know how -

It seems that every two years, before returning to the states he sells furniture, car etc etc and more or less, returns here on leave (vacation?) and brings everything new - 5000 - except for his original outfit, he's made money hand over fist, because "Yee know how everyone craves modern equipment and cars - and will pay anything to get 'em".

Example of ethical, honorable approach to life is so needed and this seems a feagront

abuse of proper attitude of getting along -

I know that its necessary to keep things two years before selling them - but its the fact that, told as a story as a sensation bespeaks the story having been told with some pride, many many times - so how is the attitude abroad?

Sincerely, in disgust,

Gloria A. Dupuis
(Mrs. A. A. Dupuis)

[REDACTED]

SUBJECT: Behavior of Americans Abroad

Re: Letter to DCI from Mrs. A. A. Dupries, 23 July 1960

Action Required: See para 3

1. The comportment of American personnel abroad has obviously had considerable impact on Mrs. Dupries. Not quite so clear is the reason behind Mrs. Dupries' selection of Mr. Dulles and the Agency as the recipients of her statement of strong concern.

2. Although [REDACTED] was the locale mentioned in the story repeated by Mrs. Dupries, we have been unable to identify anyone by the name of [REDACTED] (either surname or given name) as a person in [REDACTED] with this Agency. Nor have we been able to identify such an individual outside Agency representation in [REDACTED]

3. We would recommend that the letter from Mrs. Dupries not be given a reply from Mr. Dulles or this Agency. Rather, it would seem preferable to refer the letter to an appropriate office (e.g., the Operations Coordinating Board secretariat, the White House staff) for an inter-agency type routine reply. Such a reply might well emphasize the personal interest of the President in this very problem, and possibly make some reference to the work of the OCB in insuring some uniformity in implementation of Executive Branch desires to utilize all available means for productive representation abroad.
